> Including Disabled Pupils in Mainstream and Special School PE

A practical course delivered in a sports hall

A practical six hour training course which ensures pupils with special educational needs, learning difficulties and physical or sensory impairments can enjoy a positive PE and games experience.

Aimed at primary and secondary school teachers, learning support assistants, coaches, SENCOs, adults other than teachers and any others involved in delivering PE and school sport.

On completion of the course, candidates will:

- Be more confident about including young disabled people in curriculum, OSHL and community settings.
- Learn new practical skills and strategies to enhance their delivery of PE and sport to include young disabled people and their non-disabled peers.
- Understand the Inclusion Spectrum and know how to utilise it to create a positive learning environment.
- Be able to apply and interpret the four strands of the PE National Curriculum to complement inclusive delivery.
- Receive guidance on how to monitor and evaluate levels and quality of inclusion.
- Be aware of current issues and opportunities for young disabled people in sport.
- Receive information on further Continuous Professional Development opportunities and useful links.

Course Modules

The day consists of a three hour core module followed by a three hour games module, focusing on individual key stage requirements.

- The core module introduces the Inclusion Spectrum as a strategy for the inclusion of a wider range of young people in PE and school sport. It uses examples from gym, athletics and games to explore practical inclusion concepts.
- The games module concentrates on the games element of the national curriculum and develops ideas explored in the core module. It introduces disability sport related games as well as ways of including more young people in traditional games.
